

David Roe, PhD

David Roe, Ph.D. is a licensed clinical psychologist, a Professor at the Department of Community Mental Health, University of Haifa, Israel, affiliated Professor at Aalborg University, Denmark and Director of the Center for Community Mental Health Research, Training, Services and Policy. His research focuses on the psychosocial processes of recovery from serious mental illness, stigma, routine outcome measurement (ROM), and the evaluation of interventions and services.

His research has been funded by several local and international sources, including NIMH, Israeli Science foundation, The Israeli Ministry of Health, The Israel National Institute for Health Services Research and Health Policy, the Israeli National Insurance Institution and the Tauber and Rich foundations. Dr. Roe has published over 200 peer reviewed articles and book chapters and co-authored three books. He serves as associate editor for the Psychiatric Rehabilitation Journal, Journal of Mental Health, BMC psychiatry and Israel Journal of Psychiatry and is on the editorial board of American Journal of Psychiatric Rehabilitation, Stigma and Health, Journal of Clinical Psychology, Psychosis and Social Welfare (Hebrew).